Paradox of a Stewardship

The Paradox of Stewardship is the secret of joy. The paradox is this: I find my greatest joy when I freely give myself away. The gift of self is the secret of Christianity. The world in which we live is unable to understand this gift of self. Some people in the world think that if you give yourself away you become a slave, a mindless automaton, somehow too stupid to think for yourself. So it rebels against the sense of self-giving and opts for a rugged individualism. It’s theme song is I Did It My Way.

But the Christian secret is that true freedom is found when we do it God’s way. The freedom of the human person is not in rugged individualism but in the free gift of self. By sharing his or her talents and gifts for other people one truly finds oneself. This is why Jesus says “he who loses his life will save it.” Stewardship is the act of laying our life down in service of others. This stewardship speaks to a double dignity that rugged individualism will never be able to achieve.

The dual dignity of Stewardship is: “You are worth my gift of self” and “I am worth giving away.” Dignity is value or worth. When I find a person worthy of my time then I tell that person: “You are worth me pouring myself out for.” But at the same time, the second side of this dignity is that I recognize: “I have something to offer.” There is a certain audacity in Stewardship: I have something to give. A steward is one who recognizes that he or she has something worth giving away. If a person is incapable of recognizing their giftedness then they will never become a gift for another. Yet the Lord has endowed each person certain talents and spiritual gifts. When you put your gifts at the service of others then you recognize: “I have value. I have dignity.” It is this value and dignity that is the very thing that makes one person a gift for another.

Rugged individualism can never say this. Rather it says “I need to hoard my gifts for myself.” But what is actually behind this idea is fear: “if I spend myself for other people then I won’t have enough for my own self.” Such individualism can also doubt one’s own value, “I have nothing to offer others.” Because of this rugged individualism leads to pessimism, despair, isolation, frustration or just simply disdain for other peoples.

Stewardship however operates differently. It says, “Since I am worthwhile I can give myself to you because you are worthwhile.” The paradox of Christianity is that I find myself when I give myself away. The payout of this paradox is joy.

DEAR ST. FRANCIS OF ASSISI PARISH FAMILY,

I am very blessed to have had the opportunity to return to St. Francis as a newly ordained priest to celebrate a Mass of Thanksgiving on June 12th. It was an amazing gift to celebrate the Mass there at my home parish with many of you present. I was overwhelmed by the many expressions of love and support which you extended both to me and to my family. I am grateful to Fr. Jarrod for his kindness and hospitality in welcoming me back to the parish and generously offering his assistance. Thank you to all of you who contributed in making the Mass and the reception a beautiful expression of your love for Jesus Christ, His Priesthood, and one of your own sons of the parish. May God reward you! Please pray for me as I begin this new life of priestly service at our friary in Newark, New Jersey, and know of my prayers for all of you as well.

In Christ,

Fr. Xavier Mariae Meiergerd, CFR

Stewardship

“Once One Chooses to Be a Disciple of Christ, Stewardship is Not an Option”

Last week we listened to the familiar story of the Good Samaritan. This week we hear two stories of serving the Lord. Abraham rushed to welcome his guests and make them comfortable. He prepared food and waited on them. Martha opened her home to Jesus and the people who came to hear him but she resented having the sole responsibility of serving her guests. Abraham recognized his guests and encouraged them to accept his hospitality. Martha’s focus on her work blinded her to the identity of her visitor. May our service to one another help us to recognize the Lord and enable us to follow Him.

Do you have a gift or love of teaching?

Are you feeling called to pass on the faith to our youth? PSR (Parish School of Religion) is looking for new catechists to lead our elementary classes this fall on Wednesday evenings! Please contact Kelly Brandt at stfranciswichitapsr@gmail.com or 316-641-1022 for more information.
